

Charge Ex-Turkish Envoy Used Relief Funds in Wall St.

Late Abdul-Hak Hussein Was Short $95,642 of Money Collected Here for the Red Crescent, Attorney Says

Allegations were made in the Surrogate Court yesterday that Abdul-Hak Hussein, who was charged with the Turkish Embassy in Washington before the severing of diplomatic relations, had failed to account for $95,642 of the $114,364 he collected for the Turkish Red Crescent, an organization corresponding to the Red Cross. The amount unaccounted for, it is alleged, was used by the diplomat in stock speculations.

Abdul-Hak Hussein died in New York in February, 1919. The statements regarding his alleged failure to account for the funds were made by Frank J. McConnell, of the law firm of Purinton and McConnell, who were retained by the Turkish government to look after its interests in the administration of the estate of Abdul-Hak Hussein.

Mr. McConnell applied to Surrogate Foley for the payment of $2,000 on account for his legal services and the further payment of $75 to Sebastian Spanish Consul General in the state, for disbursements made by him. Surrogate Foley signed an order for the payment of these amounts.

Mr. McConnell in his affidavit said Abdul-Hak Hussein supervised the holding of bazaars and other public affairs designed to collect funds for the Turkish Red Crescent in New York, Chicago, Detroit, St. Augustine and other cities. The proceeds were sent to the Turkish Embassy at Washington. The attorney said that his information was that Abdul-Hak Hussein received $114,364 from this source and forwarded only $18,722 to Constantinople. Mr. McConnell interviewed Mrs. Hussein, widow of the diplomat, at her apartment at 8 West Ninety-second Street, and also officials of the embassy, and learned that the funds Abdul-Hak Hussein received from the bazaars was all that his estate amounted to in this country. Mrs. Hussein waived her rights to be appointed administratrix of her husband's estate.
